Machinery which reduced the call for human labor in farming has vastly increased the demand in manufacturing. Finally, increased facilities for travel and transportation of food have removed nearly all restrictions formerly imposed on the growth of cities. This massing of populations has on the one hand stimulated all that is best, noblest and most magnificent in human achievement, and, on the other hand, it has been productive of evils so many and various as to be almost incredible to persons who have seen them with their own eyes. How to check the growth of these evils, and to remedy them so far as they have already appeared, constitute the stupendous task commonly known as the problem of the city. Note 2. Complexity of the Problem. Our modern great cities hold vast aggregations of wealth. Commerce and the...
